Chronic Car Deal Illiteracy Syndrome ©

(CCDIS) remains at epidemic levels as the automobile celebrates its 102nd birthday. Unfair, manipulative and fraudulent auto sales and service practices cost America's friends and families tens of billions of dollars every year.

40% of auto repairs are unnecessary, costing consumers $40 billion annually in the US.

Erasing CCDIS is academic; elementary, actually. It's as simple as making for yourself and others (teachers, students, bosses, staff, associates, clients and customers) the simple but often overlooked or forgotten and free "Car-Deal-Literacy-to-Library-Connection." It's that simple. Merely remind family, friends, and others that they may help save themselves and others hundreds and thousands of dollars over a lifetime of auto ownership and operation, by reviewing the several books available at the library or bookstore, on how to buy, operate, and service autos without getting taken for the classic car deal ride and paying too much every time. Learn the traditional costly car deal tricks and mistakes, and save money for better personal, social, and environmental needs, causes and charities.

Fraud alone in auto sales and service practices cost consumers at least $22 billion annually.

On average, a lifetime of auto ownership and operation costs now exceed $400,000, more than twice the cost of median priced American homes.

Women and minorities pay more on average for car sales and service due to bias.
