

WHEREAS: The classic problems of direct democracy have been mitigated...

Living Wages?
Decent Teachers' Pay?
Corporate Welfare Reform?
Campaign Finance Reform?

"If God had Intended us to Vote, S'he'd've Given us Democracy"

Balancing asymmetrical political governance...

Reclaiming Representative Government

THEREFORE:

Redemocracy: Is a modest proposal for affecting real government reform for better and more responsive, more democratic government--

"We The People" once Amended the US Constitution to permit popular election of US senators.

Re -- by vesting a meaningful and direct public voice (not necessarily the last word) in all non-emergency non-ministerial lower-house -- state, national, & global legislation,

Sow Democracy Real Democracy, Harvest Peace!

Re -- by merely vesting only the legislative ratification powers and duties of only the House of Representatives (and or lower state houses) directly with the people via secured electronic, phone, computer, mail and absentee ballot, after HOR debate and bill-packaging, and after public debate, public agendizing, and public calendaring House proposed bills for public consideration, -- for ratification directly by the public.

One thing more important that how big government is, is how representative it is...

Re -- the Presidency, the Senate and the Courts would remain as currently unreformed and their functions would continue unchanged for continuity and safeguards against the potential for majoritarian over-reach.

Local and state governments can likewise be made more democratic as well, while protecting individual rights.

Fix the voting systems & Just put it on the ballot

Every mail box, phone, computer, and ATM (? :-) also a secure voting booth!
